THE ELECTIONS

Although this is an off-year, as far as the Presidential election is concerned, the Congressional elections of November are rapidly approaching. And, as far as Congress is concerned, this November's elections are as important as those of any other election year.

In the Senate, the upper legislative body of Congress, the general expectation is that the Democrats will retain control. This is because circumstances favor them in the form of fewer expiring Democratic seats and because, traditionally, the party out of power has a tendency to gain in off-year elections. All indications are that the Democrats will make a nice increase in their Senate majority.

In the lower legislative body, the outcome can become confused in many districts, because of the greater influence of local issues. President Eisenhower has just awakened to the challenge facing his party, and indicates that the Administration will be active in seeking the election of Republicans. This comes in the fact of the summary of many polls, that "this is a Democratic year." It must be conceded that the easing of the business situation, and a slight cooling off in the foreign picture, might tend to aid Republican chances. However, there is not much left to the predictor but to say that the Democrats will add to their majority in the House of Representatives, perhaps by very sizeable numbers.

This suits us very well. We favor the Democratic party. But, if the Democratic victories come about as predicted, it would likely be that the position of the "liberals" in the party would be bettered at the expense of the party "conservatives." As of now, we would predict just that, that the new Congress, regardless of party, will swing to the "liberal" tangent.

THE ART OF LIFE

The art of cultivating a nice and constructive life is the key to happiness, understanding and contentment. For, after all, what else is there in life, if one does not make something of his own.

A friend had a wonderful experience in recent days, in seeing how the various Scandinavian peoples cultivate worthwhile lives — with relatively little material wealth. Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Iceland were visited—as well as England.

Perhaps the greatest temptation of American life, characterized by a feverish industry and material leaning, is to lose sight of the real values of life. One need not have many worldly goods, or riches, to realize this.

In Europe, it must be admitted, people are often happier than their American counterparts, even though they may ride to work on a bicycle year-round, and work for comparatively modest wages. Yet, they seem to realize genuine enjoyment and contentment in doing the small things, insignificant things, we might think, together.

Family life is to be admired and the teenagers often spend their Saturday nights with their own family, and a number of other families, and while they dance and make merry, the family remains together and the youngsters do not seem to think their style is cramped.

The women, especially, seem to be happy — and spend their effort and time taking care of their husband and family, and making a home and caring for what is in it and those who live in it. This is the ultimate in woman's destiny and function and fulfilling it inevitably makes for happiness. Too many American women lose sight of this in their efforts to imitate men, either in the business world or in the world of parental authority, and end up with hen-pecked jellyfish as husbands, who do not provide any parental authority for the youngsters of the home or anyone else.

The art of cultivating a constructive and Christian and nice life, then, is the greatest task to face any of us. An orderly life, with time at home, and understanding of our function in society, and our responsibilities and an effort to get on well, are all part of the picture to be kept in mind.

Peace would automatically descend upon the earth if every individual and every nation would stop trying to secure unearned advantages.

This Mechanical Age

Cody, Wyo. The horse is losing out in his last domain—pack trips into the wilderness.

The Wyoming Game and Fish Department wanted to move a game warden patrol station from an area west of Meeteetse to a new site high in the hills on Jack Creek. The department estimated it would take 100 pack horses four days to move the cabin, board by board, its stove and other equipment.

A helicopter made 27 aerial sweeps and moved it in one day.

LOANS AVAILABLE THROUGH FARMER'S HOME ADMINISTRATION

Loans are available through the Farmers Home Administration for the improvement or construction of an adequate farm and home water supply, according to Reese O. McCormick, Jr., the agency's local county supervisor.

More and more farm families are realizing that an adequate supply of good safe water is essential for the farm and home. Many are searching for a means to provide this kind of water.

The Farm Housing loan provides a means for the family to have and enjoy this type of water supply. The loan is also available for the construction, improvement or repair of farm houses and essential farm buildings.

Farmers Home Administration loans are provided only when a bank or other lender cannot adequately serve the farm owner's credit needs, at the present time. The agency does not compete with conventional or cooperative lenders, Mr. McCormick said, but supplements the credit services supplied by other sources.

Hitchhiker Big Surprise

Louisville, Ky.- Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Shryock got one of life's nicer surprises recently when they stopped to pick up a hitchhiker.

The hitchhiker was none other than their son Paul, on his way home on leave from military duty in Korea.

The Shryocks didn't know he was coming.

. . . you need an
ELECTRIC CLOTHES DRYER

Mrs. Modern can laugh at washday drizzles or downpours. She commands captive sunshine to do her drying. What's more, she needn't even stay home while her Electric Dryer works its magic. It dries clothes to perfection . . . then shuts off automatically.

Mrs. M cuts ironing time in half. Things come from her Electric Dryer so fluffy smooth she can just fold away a good half of her wash without ironing.

Next time, YOU be Mrs. M! Resolve that you will never again do clothes line drudgery . . . never again wash things over because of outdoor dust or soot . . . never again hang the house full of wet wash on a rainy Monday.
